MRS. FRANCES WHITMAN

Mrs. Frances Whitman passed away at the home of her son, Clyde, on Grover Hill, April fourth.

Mrs. Whitman was the widow of the late Albert L. Whitman. She had been in failing health since the death of her husband in 1926, and had made her home with her son, Clyde.

She spent the first part of the winter with her son, Evander, returning to Grover Hill early in March. Shortly after returning she became ill and failed rapidly. Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Whitman were assisted in caring for her by her sister, Mrs. Mary Blake, her niece, Mrs. Beatrice Andrews and her son, Evander.

Mrs. Whitman was born in Milan N. H., January 11, 1863, the daughter of Van Buren and Malvina Blake. She was united in marriage May 12, 1883 with Albert L. Whitman and they made their home on the Whitman homestead at Grover Hill, Bethel. Three sons were born of this union, Clyde L. of Grover Hill, Carl who died in infancy, and Evander B. of Norway. A niece, Beatrice (Blake) Andrews was cared for from infancy and filled the place of a daughter in her heart and home.

Mrs. Whitman was a good, practical nurse. She was ever ready to lend a helping hand and was greatly misadvised when failing health made it no longer possible to answer the call of neighbors and friends.

Besides her two sons and niece, she leaves to mourn her loss, four grand children, three brothers and one sister. She was laid to rest beside her husband in the cemetery on the First Words of comfort to the bereaved family were spoke by Rev. L. A. Edwards of Bethel. The flowers were many and beautiful.

Those who attended the funeral from out of town were Ellsworth Blake, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Blake, George Blake and son Lawrence, and Mildred Jewett of Milan, N. H.; Mr. and Mrs. Mary Blake, son Edwin, and daughter Helen; Mr. and Mrs. James Goodrich and Mr. and Mrs. John Trevelyan of Portsmouth, N. H.; Mr. and Mrs. Franz Whitman of Clinton, Maine.

ROSSINI CLUB CHORUS IN W. R. CHATMAN'S "SPRING JOY" 18. A FEATURE OF CONCERT

William R. Chapman's song, "Spring Joy," sung by the Rossini Club Women's Chorus was enthusiastically received Sunday afternoon in City Hall when that organization, under the direction of Mrs. Marion W. Thies, appeared with Charles Raymond Cronham, municipal organist. Mr. Chapman's song is a bright composition of real merit and was well sung by the Rossini Chorus with Miss Avis Lamb as soloist. Miss Lamb had the obligation of singing comedy and added considerably to the enjoyment of the number.

She resigned her school last fall and has since been with her parents much of the time. She was united in marriage with Leo V. Walton Dec. 24, 1926. She leaves her husband and infant son, her parents and a younger sister, Miss Maxine Elliott.

"A PAIR OF SIXES"

Again a strong cast under the personal direction of Harold A. Anderson brings to Odeon Hall on the evening of April 18, under the auspices of the Bethel Lions Club, Edward Peple's farce comedy, "A Pair of Sixes."

After the performance at Norway, March 21st, the universal opinion expressed by the local amateur dramatic critics was "the best of the season." Purely a laughing vehicle, with not a serious line, developing an extremely funny plot, and free of slapstick comedy, you can enjoy this piece wholeheartedly, without the feeling that your sense of humor is being imposed upon.

If you like a good laugh, you have everything before you for that purpose. The cast of 12 people are particularly fitted for their respective roles, and their one hobby is farce-comedy. They have, in their several character portrayals proven themselves equal to the best of Norway's well known players.

Some of the players have been seen in Bethel before and will be welcome as old friends, while others are making their first appearance in "A Pair of Sixes," which is another way of saying Laugh, Laugh, Laugh.

Reserved tickets will be on sale at Bosserman's Drug Store Monday, April 14.

BETHEL GIRL TO DEBATE AGAINST MAINE

The final debate of the year at Bates College will be held in the Bates Little Theatre in Lewiston on Friday, April 25, when a team of Bates women varsity debaters will meet a trio of University of Maine speakers to discuss the question of censorship.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Taking of Fifteenth Decennial Census Under Way With New Features.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

UNCLE SAM is counting his nephews and nieces and finding out a lot about their prosperity or lack of it. In other words, the fifteenth decennial census is being taken. This big job will be finished in the cities within two weeks of the start, and in the rural districts within one month.

Besides population, this census includes unemployment, agriculture, irrigation, drainage, manufactures, mining, and distribution. The distribution census, which is a new feature, will be made up of statistics of goods sold by wholesale and retail merchants and dealers and of the number of persons employed in trade. Unemployment, considered as a separate subject of inquiry, also is new, although some of the previous censuses have included a single question asking the number of months in which persons have been unemployed during the year.

For the first time each family is asked whether it owns or rents its home, the value of the home or how much rent is paid. Another new question concerns the age of each individual at first marriage, and a third question, "Is there a radio set in your home?" Answers to these questions are expected to furnish valuable new information never before compiled in the United States.

It will be interesting to compare the results of the count with the figures given by the census clock, an ingenious piece of mechanism in the office of the director of the census in Washington. At one minute after midnight on April 1, when the census started officially, this clock gave the population of the United States as 22,186,803.

The enumerators actually began their work on April 2, and at one o'clock that afternoon President Hoover met J. Sterling Moran, supervisor for the District of Columbia, outside the White House and handed him a filled out family schedule. Everything in it was confidential, as is the case with the replies of every other person in the country.

Missouri, New Jersey and Idaho contested the first district in the census. Centertown, Colo. county, Mo., which takes its name from the fact that it is the exact geographical center of the state, telegraphed its claim to being the first town to complete the task, to census headquarters. Contesting that honor was Kootenai county, Idaho, which reported the enumeration there completed at 9:30 a. m. Morels township, Morris county, N. J., finished early in the afternoon.

THOUGH wet and dry figures are not included in the census, those supplied by the Literary Digest's national straw vote are being given out daily and are apparently significant enough to give the supporters of prohibition in its present form considerable concern. Dry leaders protest that this poll is unfair, and Senators Jones and Bill of Washington asserted in the senate that the ballots were sent mostly to men. Mr. Hill asked the Digest editor whether women were being discriminated against and was told that the ballots were sent to the same persons who got them in a Presidential election poll in 1928.

Because of the consideration of the tariff bill on the floor of the house of representatives, the judiciary committee's hearings on the Eighteenth amendment were suddenly halted. Dr. F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, and four other dry leaders were permitted to insert their statements in the record, but the vote much to their disgust, had no opportunity to cross examine them. The keynote of all the statements was sounded by Doctor McBride in this sentence: "Prohibition at its best, even in the worst cities and in the worst places within these cities, is better than the old-time licensed liquor traffic at its best."

Doctor McBride declared that the wets have failed to prove their major contention—that the Eighteenth amendment fails to contribute most effectively toward the solution of the liquor problem; that the people are asking for repeal, and that they, the wets, have a constructive program upon which they can unite.

FOLLOWING several hours of discussion, the house by a vote of 421 to 153 approved of a special rule to send the tariff bill to conference. The rule made no mention of the verbal understanding that before final action is taken by the conferees separate votes will be asked in the house on sugar, cement, lumber and shingles. The conferees appointed by Vice President Curtis and Speaker Longworth were the ranking members of the senate committee and of the house ways and means committee. They include none of the so-called radicals.

SENATOR MORRIS of Nebraska, sponsor of the pending resolution for government operation of the Muscle Shoals project, in a speech in the senate demanded that the American Farm Bureau federation repudiate Chester Gray, its Washington lobbyist, asserting that Gray had been exposed by the lobby investigating committee as a traitor to the farmers' cause. The Nebraska senator reviewed Gray's cooperation with the Tennessee River Improvement association, a lobby in behalf of the cyanamide bid for Muscle Shoals formerly headed by C. H. Houston, now Republican national committee chairman.

CONGRESSMAN SNELL'S resolution calling for the appointment of a joint congressional and executive commission to study the question of giving the President power to draft man power and capital in event of war was passed by the house without a record vote.

Approval of the measure after five hours of acrimonious debate was featured by a signal victory for labor interests opposed to the conscription of workmen for industrial purposes in wartime. In its original form the Snell measure provided for a study of labor conscription as well as the drafting of industry and man power in event of war. So much opposition developed to the labor phase of the inquiry that an amendment was finally adopted stipulating that the commission "should not consider and should not report upon the advisability of conscripting labor."

OVER production of wheat in the Northwest may be checked if the farmers take kindly to the plan put forward by Chairman Lodge of the farm board at the suggestion of Dr. J. L. Conter, chief economist of the tariff commission. The plan is for the farmers to exchange part of their seed wheat to the farm board for flax, barley, rye and oats for planting this year. Conter, loaned to the farm board, started on a two weeks' tour of the wheat belt to try to put the scheme into effect. He hopes to cut the wheat acreage in Minnesota and the Dakotas by two million acres.

It is forecast by the Millers' National federation that the United States' carry-over of the present crop into the new crop year on July 1 will be close to that of a year ago. The carry-over this year is estimated at 243,500,000 bushels, compared to 245,000,000 bushels on hand last July 1, the forecast states.

WHATEVER else came out of the London naval conference, there is to be a three-power limitation agreement. It was officially announced at American delegation headquarters Thursday that the American, British and Japanese were in complete accord.

The Americans and British, at a meeting with the Japanese at St. James' palace, indicated acceptance of the Japanese reservations. The only points to be settled are details relating to Japanese reservations on the scrapping and replacing of ships in order to keep their dockyards working. It was said there would be no factor of difficulty in any of the Japanese reservations. The Root-Matsudaira formula had previously been accepted by the Japanese government with four reservations which were considered merely technical.

With this highly encouraging basis to go on, the delegates went ahead with their negotiations designed to satisfy the security pact demands of France in the high hope that the French and Italians could be brought into accord with the other powers for the adoption of a five-power treaty. Italy was asked to join with Great Britain and France in a mutual security arrangement affecting the Mediterranean, and conversations were continued concerning how far the British should go in guaranteeing France against aggression. Prime Minister MacDonald has given parliament assurance that Great Britain will undertake no new military commitments, but it was hoped the French could be satisfied, nevertheless. The plenary session of the conference, scheduled for Friday, was indefinitely postponed so that Briand and Henderson might continue their search for a formula acceptable to both their governments, and also to Italy, which had not abandoned the demand for parity with France.

Nationalistic organizations of Japan staged a demonstration against the acceptance of the Root-Matsudaira agreement, declaring it was a humiliating surrender of means of national defense in the face of American demands.

ONE of the minor worries of the government came to the front when it was found that Anna Anastasia Tchakovsky, who claims to be the youngest daughter of the slain Russian czar Nicholas II, had overstayed the visitor's permit, on which she was permitted to enter the country. The immigration bureau could order her expulsion, but nothing further could be done about it, for there is no place to which she could be deported. There are already outstanding papers for the deportation of some 700 undesirable Russian natives, but since 1921 the Russian government has declined to receive any of them. They cannot be held in other countries, so here they remain.

WILLIAM T. COSGROVE, whose resignation as president of the executive council of the Irish Free State parliament was forced by an adverse vote, was re-elected by the dail circuit by a vote of 80 to 65. Eamon de Valera and T. J. O'Mahony were first proposed for the place and were defeated decisively after a long and bitter debate.

DR. OTTO BREITING, the new chancellor of Germany, has formed a ministry which has a good chance to last for some time, although it includes no Socialists. A motion of no confidence in the cabinet, proposed by the Socialists and Communists, was defeated, 222 to 187, because the Nationalists, who hold the balance of power in the Reichstag, refused to support it. If the government had fallen Chancellor Breiting, with the consent of President von Hindenburg, would have dissolved the Reichstag. He gained the friendship of the Nationalists by promising a generous farm relief program.

BY THE big majority of 246 to 23 the French chamber of deputies ratified the Young reparations plan and authorized President Doumergue to sign this final act for liquidation of the World war and for the evacuation of the Rhineland. The closing day of the debate was quiet, despite warnings of the Nationalists that withdrawal of French troops from the Rhineland would release another German invasion.

WILLIAM GREEN, president of the American Federation of Labor, told the senate interstate commerce committee that 3,700,000 wage earners were unemployed in February, losing a total of $400,000,000 in wages. Workless wage earners lost at least $1,000,000,000 in wages during the first three months of this year, he added.

"One billion dollars' worth of wealth," said Mr. Green, "created by our wage earners and spent for the products and the services of our industries in three months, would undoubtedly be more than sufficient to turn the tide of business from recession to advance."

Unemployment in the ranks of the federation has not fallen below 8 per cent of the total membership in the last 27 months, according to Mr. Green. (R. 1119, Western Newspaper Union.)

a new hat on a well-dressed man

WEAR a new hat with a shabby suit—you'll look better.

Wear a new hat with a good suit—you'll look splendid.

Ethyl fluid is like a new hat.

Add Ethyl to ordinary gasoline—and the gasoline becomes better.

Add Ethyl to the best possible gasoline—and you have the finest motor fuel that science has yet produced.

Before we added Ethyl to Socony Special, it was acknowledged the best gasoline sold in New York and New England. We added Ethyl to Socony Special at the same price—sales jumped 40%.

Socony Special plus Ethyl is the fastest selling premium gasoline because it makes motorists actually feel their cars come alive.

Remember, too, that it is the only premium gasoline sold in New York and New England, to which Ethyl has been added.

Try it. Feel your car come alive. And become—as you will—one of its enthusiastic boosters.

A Girl's Gotta Be Sure

THEODORE TINSLEY
(Copyright)

It was the third time in as many minutes that Myra darted a frowning glance at the cheap living room clock, but her underlip quivered nervously, and then at Rita. Rita was her married sister. Rita's wrong, kid? Rita asked. "You're worried. Boy friend tonight?" Myra nodded. She played with a small mirror fidget. "Listen, Rita; he—he asked me last night. Dave wants me to marry him. I'm so glad. Dave's what'd yuh tell him, hon?" "I told him I—I gotta be sure," she said darkly. "I guess we'll go down oney tonight." "Now listen, Myra! If you let him down you're gonna be sorry. Let this Coney business." Myra smiled mysteriously and shook her head. "Just a little test." The door buzzer sounded sharply. Myra retreated. Myra answered the door. She was trembling. She gave a lot. "Followed her into the empty living room. He laid his new hat on the floor, kid," he whispered huskily. "I was in his arms. Dizzily she looked at him away."

"See?" His voice sounded thickly. "Yuh think it over, hon? I can't let this way—I gotta know!" "Yes. . . . Listen, I'll tell you tonight sure. Honest, I will you take me to Coney?" "Sure. Why not?" He drew a deep breath. They mingled with the shuffling, spinning mob that clogged the gaudy sidewalks of Surf avenue. It was a tangle of unnoted through the noise and badgered by wheedling salesmen, pinched and buffeted and eluded by a roaring, good-natured master born of thousands of twines like themselves.

Presently they came to lurid lights and a packed eddy of people. A trum-bled. A sweating barker began yawn. Above his head were amazing lithographs of men and monsters. Canvas banner flapped over an entrance carved in Coney Island porch.

Myra made a small dry sound. "I gotta go in, Dave." "Okay, hon." The air was soggy and humid inside. Dave mopped his brow; kind of, he thought. A ratty-looking stur was talking. On the stage, Bobo, the Mystery, rose to his feet. Bobo was a yellow, cadaverous man with white duck trousers and a soiled shirt. With a gentle, faraway smile, Bobo plucked at the loose skin over his gaudy collar bone, drew it gingerly upward to his forehead and it snapped back. The crowd murmured. He did it again. "Ponderly. . . . The yellowish skin, red, taut and rubbery."

"Aw gee," whispered Dave weakly. "I didn't dare look at that!" "Ponderly. . . . The yellowish skin, red, taut and rubbery."

"I thought you'd like it," Myra faltered. "Not me. It was only a test of you." She shook her head. "Ugh! I hate it. I didn't dare look at it." "Why, I thought you wanted to be in it?" "I did!" she cried. "I did!" She was laughing, patting his arm, looking disjunctly. "Dave—I'm silly. I'm a fool—but I don't care! Maybe you think I'm crazy—but, Dave, if you had looked at those—those things in there—enjoyed it, I can—I couldn't ever have seen you like that. I couldn't!"

"Why, hon?" He was puzzled. "Because—oh, I can't explain it. It wouldn't matter a bit if we thought different about everything on earth—except that fact! I had to know about that! Live together means thinking—oh, you know—feeling about silly, crazy little things like—well, like freaks. Thank God you can't bear 'em either!" She faced him defiantly, with a quivering smile. "There! Ain't I crazy?" He pondered the matter dazedly. Her hand was plucking at his sleeve. Her wet lashes sparkled faintly. "Dave—Sweetie—" she faltered. "Oh, Dave, ask me something—quick—before I die!" A hot dog man eyed the merger with a bland island grin. He'd seen lots of pairs slide by in his wise old life. He sighed as he forked up a warm, buttering canine for a customer, and he smiled pessimistically. "Have a good crotch, kids," he growled softly. "You'll be married soon enough!"

The Crippled Lady Of Peribonka

By
James Oliver Curwood

W.N.U. Service

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Introducing some of the people of the pretty little French village of Peribonka, particularly the Crippled Lady, who is the heroine of the story. She is a woman of unusual beauty and of an unusual life.

CHAPTER II.—How the romance of the Crippled Lady began. The story is told in a series of chapters, each beginning with a chapter heading.

CHAPTER III.—Paul's wife is in the hospital. The story continues with the Crippled Lady's life and the events that lead to her condition.

CHAPTER IV.—Paul's wife is in the hospital. The story continues with the Crippled Lady's life and the events that lead to her condition.

CHAPTER V.—Claire announces her engagement to Paul. The story continues with the Crippled Lady's life and the events that lead to her condition.

CHAPTER VI.—Paul goes to Quebec. The story continues with the Crippled Lady's life and the events that lead to her condition.

CHAPTER VII.—Paul returns. The story continues with the Crippled Lady's life and the events that lead to her condition.

CHAPTER VIII.—Paul's wife is in the hospital. The story continues with the Crippled Lady's life and the events that lead to her condition.

CHAPTER IX.—Paul's wife is in the hospital. The story continues with the Crippled Lady's life and the events that lead to her condition.

CHAPTER X.—Paul's wife is in the hospital. The story continues with the Crippled Lady's life and the events that lead to her condition.

In the direction he had gone. It was like Paul to take the situation in this way, as if it were an unimportant incident rather than a tragic thing.

Light was fading swiftly, and evening shadows were falling between the deep, close walls of the crevasse. A radiance was in Claire's face, as if a voiceless spirit within her were sending a message to some one in the world above.

She could hear Paul's footsteps returning, the iron nails in his boots striking on rock, and her lips moved, yearning to call his name. Then she ran down into the hollow and up its farther edge. After all, it might not be such a sword of Damocles over them. If it were not, then Paul could only scold. If it were—

She began to climb.

Paul heard the crash. He was a little beyond the place where he had left Claire, and ran to it, calling her name. He leaped through the dust which was settling quickly and heavily, and saw the hollow choked to the brim with the debris of the avalanche.

Carla was caught in the last grip of it near the crest of the rock slip. The upper part of her body was out, and she was alive when Paul reached her. He tried to speak as he tore at the rocks. But his voice was gone. He saw Carla's eyes looking at him with the light fading out of them.

She made no sound. Her eyes were closed when he had her in his arms at last. Yet she was not dead—he found himself saying the words over and over as he climbed with her out of the fissure.

It may be that the full story of Carla Haldan and Paul would never have been known had it not been for the happening of this night. It seems reasonable that neither Claire nor Lucy-Belle nor the others would have told the more intimate of its details.

A madman told the story. The madman was Paul. He came into the engineers' camp in the middle of the night. They did not know him at first, for brush and limbs and rocks had disfigured him in the darkness. His face was like that of a man who had been beaten with naked fists. His clothes were half gone. His feet were bleeding through the shredded leather of his boots.

In his arms he carried a woman; a dead woman, they thought. Not until Derwent unwrapped the coat with which her head and shoulders were protected and saw her face could he clearly realize that the man was Paul.

in bring out the love in a woman's heart," said Derwent, remembering Paul's years of loneliness.

"Yes, it does," said Paul, and he saw Carla's face between him and the words which Claire had written.

He went to see Carla soon afterward. He had taken a great deal of pride in the clean, white hospital he had built for the company, and now he blessed it. Derwent told him what it had meant for Carla. They had X-rayed her and had made the extraordinary discovery that there was not a broken bone in her body. But something had happened to her back and she was paralyzed from her waist down.

Temporarily, he believed. Knowing what Paul would have done under the circumstances, he had sent to Quebec and Montreal for expert assistance, to consult with the company staff.

Carla was propped up against a mass of pillows in her snowy bed when Paul arrived. Everything was white about her, except the dark arch of her hair—the room, the bed, her face, her face. Like that with two silky strands streaming over her shoulders, she might have been a child, one who had been a long time sick, and who had been a long time about her. He had not expected to find her so like a fly-petted flower whose scent a breath might carry away.

He seated himself beside her and so far her hand crept over the cover to him. It was helplessly weak. Her fingers were only a feathery press about his.

"Please don't scold me, Paul," she said faintly, trying to smile. "You see, I was right. If the rocks had buried you, I could never have got you out and brought you home. Could I?"

He did not answer, but held her hand so closely that a joyous thrill, melody of content came for a moment in her throat. "I am glad I can't afford you would be angry with me. Now I know I shall get well quickly."

It seemed difficult for them to find things to say. Paul, fighting with the grimly set lines of an Indian's face, was holding back, and he wanted to tell her, Carla, that a little more and she would have died. Her own weakness letting down the thing which both were valiantly making an effort to hold between them.

He told her about the specialists who were on their way, and that their own staff had no doubt but that she would very soon be on her feet again. He tried to talk without a strain in his voice, yet he could feel the falseness and pretense of his effort when he wanted to take her in his arms and kiss her pale, sweet face.

Carla knew this, too. At last, when it was time for him to leave her, she said: "When are you going home?"

"I don't know," he replied. "I must be soon," she urged. "I want it that way. You must start to-day—or tomorrow. Only that will make me well. Claire wants you. Please—read this."

She gave him a crumpled yellow slip of paper. It was a telegram crushed. If she had been holding it a long time before he came. He smoothed it out and read the words which his wife had sent her. The message was almost identical with the one he had received, giving him the impression that Carla, in the stress of her emotion, had been able to find but a single thought for them both.

"I am so happy," it said. "Send Paul to me as quickly as you can. Only God knows how glad I am."

"She has faith in me," said Carla. "She asks me to send you to her. What a privilege, that is, Paul, for me to be able to give another! No matter how hard I try I can never be as wonderful as Claire. The world does not hold many women like her. She loves you. She wants you. When will you go to her?"

"You said—tomorrow," he said. "Yes, tomorrow."

He rose, and stood looking down at her. "I will go," he said. "But some time I will come for you, Carla. May be not now, but in this life, but sometime. May I continue to dream that?"

"It is not a dream," she said. "It is faith. I am giving you up for a little while, that is all. Sometime, in another life, these tests which God put upon us will return you to me."

When he looked back at her from the door she was smiling, her eyes filled with tears.

He tried to readjust himself to the time of his last visit with Carla and her departure for home. His effort was an honest one, a struggle to tell himself to certain demands which he accepted as necessary and inevitable. He was sure of himself as he returned to Claire. It was at that moment, however, which left upon him, as a sign, a spiritual of peace and content.

He was possessed by the memories which blessed him as they passed. It was as if some one in his mind was a part of himself, which said: "I have a room where one can enter and see a picture. There are a number of pictures. There are life pictures. There are the memory. He made no effort to turn away from the truth or to turn himself in the contemplation of it. Some one had said that memory was a picture from which one could not turn away. And the room which had built itself in his heart could never be leveled or taken away from him. It was indestructible, like a soul.

Carla, in a way, became the keeper of the door. Because of her he would never open it except to himself. He could conceive of no one but Claire in this sacred place. A long time ago, when he was a boy, there had been in his room a picture of an angel with snowy wings and golden hair. She seemed to be floating through clouds and he remembered that his first ideas of heaven came from this angel and that she inspired him to ask questions which his mother sometimes found difficult to answer.

The picture had always remained in his mind. It was impossible for him to feel regret or to change it, or even a desire to change it, in going to her. They were conscious women at whose knees the world found its spiritual story. Claire, he knew was one of them. He was the angel in his room. It was he who had been the most in love with her, and this effect in himself he was prepared to remedy—it in itself.

CHURCH ACTIVITIES

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

L. A. Edwards, Pastor
9:30 Church School. Miss Ida Packard, Superintendent.

10:45 Morning Worship, with sermon by the pastor, Subject, "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow."

The world has emerged from her yesterdays, carrying very little intellectual and moral baggage. Yesterday exists for the most of us, only as a memory; we have cut loose from the traditions of the past that furnished for our fathers an almost infallible guide. For them, "We have always done things this way," was a sufficient guarantee of its rightness; while the new and untried, alone, appeals to the modernist. We think, however, that the poet was right when he wrote, "We are living, we are dwelling, in a grand and awful time: In an age on ages telling: To be living is sublime."

Every new day is freighted with privilege that comes but once. To make the most of Today, then, becomes for every person a sacred obligation. What we are and what we do today determines with unerring accuracy what we shall be and do tomorrow. 8:30 Meeting of the Comrades of the Way.

QUALITY THAT ENDURES

The extra value built into the new Ford car is reflected in its alert, capable performance, reliability and long life.

Beneath its flashing beauty of line and color, there is a mechanical excellence unusual in a low priced car. Many measurements are accurate to the thousandth of an inch. Every part has been carefully designed and made to give you many thousands of miles of faithful, uninterrupted service.

In safety, comfort, speed, power, economy—in all that goes to make a good automobile—it is a value far above the price. The quality of the new Ford is a quality that endures.
